Trump gets royal treatment from queen on UK state visit

REUTERS

The president, however, called London Mayor Sadiq Khan a "stone-cold loser."

Donald Trump and Queen Elizabeth hailed the bonds between the United States and the United Kingdom on Monday after the president was feted with a day of pomp designed to bolster an alliance strained by discord over Brexit and China.

Trump's interventions into Britain's political crisis over Brexit had threatened to overshadow his state visit to London but instead the president appeared to relish the royal red carpet that his hosts laid out for him and wife Melania.

The three-day trip was cast as a chance to celebrate Britain's "special relationship" with the U.S., boost trade links in a post-Brexit world and reaffirm security cooperation ahead of the 75th anniversary of the allied D-Day landings in World War II.

"The bond between our nations was forever sealed in that great crusade," Trump said in a speech at the lavish banquet at Buckingham Palace.

"As we honor our shared victory and heritage, we affirm the common values that will unite us long into the future: freedom, sovereignty, self-determination, the rule of law and reference for the rights given to us by almighty God."

"The bond between our nations was forever sealed in that great crusade."

President Trump

While the proudly unpredictable 45th U.S. president lavished praise on the 93-year-old queen, his views on Britain's exit from the E.U., on the possible successor to Theresa May as British prime minister and a row over China's Huawei have cast a pall over the visit.

Even as he flew into London, he reignited a feud with Mayor Sadiq Khan — who had written on Sunday that Britain should not be rolling out the red carpet for Trump — describing the mayor as a "stone-cold loser."

The state visit was promised by May back in January 2017 when she became the first foreign leader to meet Trump after he took office.

The first day of such a visit is customarily engagements and ceremonies.

At Buckingham Palace, Melania — in an elegant, white below-the-knee Dolce & Gabbana dress with navy blue collar and belt and a custom hat by Herve Pierre — stood alongside the queen and Charles' wife Camilla, while Charles and the president inspected the guard.

After lunch with Elizabeth and other senior royals, the queen gave the Trumps a guided tour of artifacts of American historical interest from the royal collection. She also showed him some of her family's golfing memorabilia in a nod to the president who owns two Scottish golf courses.

The queen's second son Prince Andrew then accompanied him to Westminster Abbey, coronation church of English monarchs for 1,000 years, where he laid a wreath at the Grave of the Unknown Warrior, before tea with Prince Charles at his home, Clarence House.

The day culminated with the opulent formal dinner, where men wear white-tie coats with tails and women, evening gowns.

COMMON VALUES

"Mr. President, as we look to the future, I am confident that our common values and shared interests will continue to unite us," the queen said.

"Tonight we celebrate an alliance that has helped to ensure the safety and prosperity of both our peoples for decades, and which I believe will endure for many years to come."

In response, Trump heralded the British monarch, saying she "embodied the spirit of dignity, duty and patriotism that beats proudly in every British heart."

Away from the pageantry, Trump has already waded into Britain's turbulent domestic politics, where more than a dozen candidates are vying to replace May, who announced last month she was quitting after failing to get her E.U. divorce deal through parliament. REUTERS

Man accused of raping 78-year-old woman arrested

2 Police have arrested a man accused of raping an elderly woman in Queens over the weekend. Investigators have identified Ryan Bayard, 30, as the man who allegedly slipped into the side door of a Rosedale home at about 6 a.m. Sunday and proceeded to sexually assault a 78-year-old woman residing there. The victim was asleep at the time, police said, and is currently in the hospital recovering. The house is located on 148th Street, and was thought to be vacant with front doors and windows reportedly boarded up and locked. According to an interview with CBS, neighbor Heather Palmer was in shock after the horrific crime. "Really, that house was supposed to be empty. That's what we know. Everyone moved out. It was locked up. So there shouldn't be anyone living in that house," Palmer said.

Madonna announces Pride Week performance

3 The world's most famous Material Girl will perform at Pride Island 2019 as part of LGBTQ Pride Month. "I hear you," she posted on her Instagram account. "I'll be on Pride Island, where I was born." Madonna confirmed that she will perform on June 30 for the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the 1969 Stonewall riots. Madonna has spent the course of her career advocating for LGBTQ rights, serving as a leading voice in AIDS activism, and countless other cases of acting as an ally. Madonna recently teased a new song, "I Rise," from her upcoming album, "Madame X," which will be released June 14. Grace Jones will headline the weekend-long live musical event featuring performances from Teyana Taylor, Pabllo Vittar, and more on Saturday, June 29, to Sunday, June 30, 2019, at Pier 97. Tickets for Pride Island Saturday and Sunday have sold out. NATE HOMAN

Man who tossed boy off mall balcony gets 19 years

4 A man who admitted hurling a 5-year-old boy off a third-floor balcony at Minnesota's Mall of America was sentenced to 19 years in prison on Monday. Emmanuel Aranda, 24, was sentenced in a Hennepin County District Court, two weeks after he agreed to the prison term and pleaded guilty to attempted first-degree murder, a crime that carries a max sentence of 20 years behind bars, said Chuck Laszewski, spokesman for the county's DA's office. The incident occurred on April 12. Both the mother and father of the child, who was critically injured in the fall, forgave Aranda in victim statements Laszewski provided to Reuters. "I don't get to judge you or hate you. Instead I am full of God's love and I have overwhelming joy and peace in my body as I sit and watch my boy heal in miraculous ways right in front of my eyes," the boy's mother said in her statement. Council considers turning Hart Island gravesite into a city park

Family members can schedule trips to the island only twice each month.

DEVIN GANNON

Hart Island. FLICKR

One of the country's largest burial grounds may become a city park.

City Council is considering making Hart Island, an island located off of the Bronx coast where roughly 1 million people have been buried since the Civil War, more accessible to visitors. Because the city's Department of Correction (DOC) currently maintains the site and hires inmates from Rikers Island to bury bodies there, access remains restricted. During a hearing last week, the City Council introduced a package of legislation aimed at improving Hart Island, including one bill that would transfer control of the land from the DOC to the city's Parks Department.

Many of those buried on Hart Island are New Yorkers who were unable to afford private burials or who were unclaimed by relatives. Those who wish to visit deceased family members are required to apply through the DOC. After they get approved and arrive at the island, visitors are escorted by staff and must surrender all possessions, including cellphones.

Family members are allowed to schedule trips, via ferry, to Hart Island just two days each month, one Thursday and one Saturday. City Council Speaker Corey Johnson has said that after 150 years, it's time to improve the burial process and the physical condition of Hart Island.

"It's heartbreaking that a million people are buried on Hart Island and there is only one Saturday a month that people can visit," Johnson tweeted on Friday. "It's an embarrassment, it's undignified, and it needs to change immediately. We must do better."

Under Parks Department control, security measures could be eliminated at Hart Island and the city could run ferries there to make it easier to visit. Officials and advocates also argue that the agency is better equipped to maintain and improve the shoreline and green space of the island.

A bill to transfer control of Hart Island to the Parks Department was first introduced in 2012 and failed. It was reintroduced in 2014 but again failed because it lacked support from either agency. Council members Yandis Rodriguez and Mark Levine again took up the cause last May.

During Thursday's hearing, the Parks Department expressed interest in taking control of the island, according to the New York Times. Matt Drury, the director of government relations for the agency, said the Parks Department would support the jurisdiction transfer once the city stopped burials there.

"This is a massive and complicated undertaking," Drury said. "The city wants to make sure this is fully thought out." According to city officials, the land can only hold up to 10 more years of burials.

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

"Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis…"

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our "Treatment Formula."

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action… step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

‘El Chapo’ lawyer dismisses US officials’ escape fears

A court filing stated the notorious drug lord’s solitary confinement to be “unnatural and inhumane.”

A lawyer for Joaquin “El Chapo” Guzman rejected prosecutors’ claims that the Mexican drug lord may try to escape from the Manhattan jail where he awaits sentencing, and said he should be afforded regular exercise on the building’s roof.

In a court filing on Sunday, lawyer Mariel Colon asked a Brooklyn federal judge to allow his client two hours a week of outdoor exercise, calling Guzman’s solitary confinement, with no exposure to sunlight or fresh air, “unnatural and inhumane.”

John Marzulli, a spokesman for the office of U.S. Attorney Richard Donoghue, which prosecuted Guzman, declined to comment.

Colon had raised concerns about Guzman’s conditions in Manhattan’s Metropolitan Correctional Center in a May 11 letter to U.S. District Judge Brian Cogan.

Prosecutors responded on May 23 that the request should be denied because the only outdoor exercise area for high-risk inmates like Guzman was on the roof, where Guzman, who twice escaped from high-security prisons in Mexico, could signal to accomplices in nearby buildings to plan a jailbreak.

They also cited an unsuccessful 1981 escape attempt at the same jail, in which a prisoner’s accomplices hijacked a sightseeing helicopter, rammed it into a metal cage surrounding the roof recreation area and threw him a pistol.

Colon said Guzman was in no position to try a similar escape, because he is forbidden from communicating with anyone but his lawyers and has no “special vision” to see faraway rooftops.

She said Guzman’s lack of outdoor exercise violated the prohibition against “cruel and unusual punishment” under the Eighth Amendment of the Constitution.

“The government should not be allowed to claim that it is okay to violate a defendant’s constitutional rights because of a design flaw in the building,” Colon wrote.

Guzman, 61, was convicted on Feb. 12 of trafficking tons of cocaine, heroin and other drugs into the United States as leader of the Sinaloa Cartel.

Jurors heard testimony from more than 50 prosecution witnesses. This included accounts of Guzman’s two earlier prison breaks, the first while hidden in a laundry cart and the second through an elaborate, mile-long tunnel dug into his cell.

He is scheduled to be sentenced on June 25, and faces mandatory life in prison. REUTERS

US health officials report 41 new cases of measles last week

REUTERS

The United States recorded 41 new measles cases last week, bringing the year's total number of cases to 981 in the worst outbreak of the disease since 1992, federal health officials said on Monday.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) said the number of cases of the highly contagious and sometimes deadly disease rose 4 percent in the week ended May 31 from the prior week. The 2019 outbreak, which has spread to 26 states, is the worst since 1992, when 2,126 cases were recorded.

Federal health officials attribute this year's outbreak to U.S. parents who refuse to vaccinate their children. These parents believe, contrary to scientific evidence, that ingredients in the vaccine can cause autism.

The disease has mostly affected children who have not received the measles-mumps-rubella (MMR) vaccine, which confers immunity to the disease.

Last week, CDC officials said the outbreak had surpassed the total number of cases per year for the past 25 years, topping the 963 cases that were confirmed in 1994.

Measles was declared eliminated in the U.S. in 2000, meaning there was no continuous transmission of the disease for a year. Still, cases of the virus occur and spread via travelers coming from countries where measles is common.

CDC officials have warned that the country risks losing its measles elimination status if the ongoing outbreak, which began in October 2018 in New York, continues until October 2019.

"Measles is preventable and the way to end this outbreak is to ensure that all children and adults who can get vaccinated, do get vaccinated," CDC Director Robert Redfield said in a statement on Thursday. "I want to reassure parents that vaccines are safe, they do not cause autism."

The outbreak has escalated since 82 people in 2018 and more than 40 people in 2019 brought measles to the United States from other countries, most frequently Ukraine, Israel and the Philippines, federal officials said. REUTERS

Sephora to shut US stores for day of diversity training

R&B singer SZA claims she was profiled in a California store.

LVMH's Sephora beauty chain said it will close all its U.S. stores, distribution centers and corporate offices on Wednesday to conduct diversity training for employees, a move that follows a racial incident involving a Grammy-nominated singer.

R&B singer SZA, who is black, said in April she was racially profiled at a Sephora store in Calabasas, California.

"We have been informed of an incident at our Calabasas store and in addition to reaching out to SZA directly, we are gathering more information about the incident in order to take the proper next steps," Emily Shapiro, a spokeswoman for Sephora, told Reuters in an email. "We take complaints like this very seriously. Profiling on the basis of race is not tolerated at Sephora."

SZA said a Sephora employee she identified as "Sandy" called security to make sure the singer was not stealing from the store. "We had a long talk. U have a blessed day Sandy," SZA said in a Twitter post.

Shapiro said the Sephora closures were not "a response to any one event," saying that planning for the "inclusivity workshops" had been in progress for several months and that a broader campaign called "We Belong to Something Beautiful" had been in the works for at least a year.

Sephora owner LVMH is based in Paris.

SZA was quoted in an interview with Refinery29 last year as saying she previously worked in the skin-care department at a Sephora store.

"You are a part of the Sephora family, and we are committed to ensuring every member of our community feels welcome and included at our stores," Sephora said at the time in a response to the singer's post.

SZA is a Grammy nominee who also collaborated with Kendrick Lamar on the song "All the Stars" for the blockbuster movie "Black Panther."

After SZA's tweet following the incident, Google reviews for the Calabasas store spiked, with many users criticizing Sephora over the incident.

Barbadian singer Rihanna last month unveiled her new fashion brand with LVMH, a rare move by the French group to set up a label from scratch as it taps into soaring demand for celebrity collaborations in the luxury world.

Sephora's workshops come about a year after Starbucks closed 8,000 stores across the United States for anti-bias training after a Philadelphia cafe manager's call to police resulted in the arrests of two black men who were waiting for a friend.

Demand Soars At NYC Medical Clinic For Promising Back Pain Treatment

Can This Medical Technology Possibly Eliminate Or Greatly Reduce Even The Most Severe Back Pain... Almost Instantly?

The Advanced Medical Treatment Every Back & Neck Pain Sufferer Needs To Know - No Matter How Bad The Pain Is Or How Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NYC Pain MD is a medical clinic with two locations in New York City that has made a name for itself by treating the worst cases of back or neck pain.

Here is what every back and neck pain sufferer who has failed to respond to other treatments and does not want surgery should know about one of the best treatment options available today for severe back and neck pain including when, why and where you should consider this treatment to get maximum results.

If you suffer with back, neck or nerve pain, you have probably already tried many treatments... especially countless pain medications.

Experienced doctors understand that even though pain medications such as anti-inflammatory pain pills are part of the recommended early treatment plan for back pain... they are rarely the answer.

In most cases they have minimal, short term results (if any) and have a laundry list of potential side effects. Some being serious and even life threatening.

Are there any better options?

Thankfully, advancements in science and technology come extremely fast. And now there is very good option to help relieve the pain.

An option that a lot of back and neck pain sufferers may have never heard of before.

Before we get into these treatments, please understand this...

NYC Pain MD is a REAL medical clinic that has treated the worst cases of back pain. Patients travel from all over to be treated at one of their clinics for all sorts of joint and muscle pain because they want the best medical treatments available.

What you are about to discover is a REAL medical treatment. Not some miracle cure you see on infomercials or on the internet.

Know this fact: There is no one treatment that will help every case of back pain. And we cannot guarantee this treatment will work for you. But this treatment has already helped countless back and neck pain sufferers who had given up hope. I bet many just like you.

What is this treatment? It's called...

Radiofrequency Neurotomy

"Radiofrequncy Neurotomy" is often referred to as RF for short.

RF is a procedure that is based on the theory that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

There are many nerves around your spine and one of their jobs is to sense PAIN.

Radiofrequency waves are delivered to these nerves under advanced imaging to "block" the nerves.

Two procedures are performed. First, a test, diagnostic "Block" procedure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function.

If this first "test" procedure is successful, the Radio Frequency Neurotomy is scheduled and performed for longer term relief.

What Results Can You Expect?

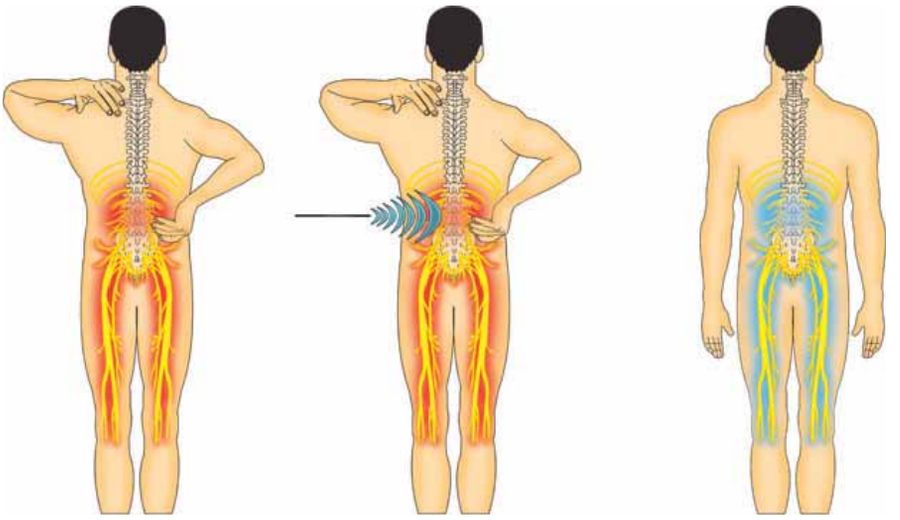
Like all real medical procedures... results vary for individual patients. No good and ethical doctor would guarantee any exact results for any procedure... that's just not how things work and it would be less than honest.

That's being said, it is not uncommon for patients to get complete, if not significant relief of their pain shortly after the treatment.

How Long Do The Results Last?

This procedure "blocks" the nerves pain signals... it does not destroy them. Therefore, the results are safe but not completely permanent. But, many patients get relief for 6 months… 12 months…. 18 months for some and some even longer. The great news is - another procedure can be safely preformed for more relief if necessary.

Advanced Treatment Uses Radio Frequencies To Relieve Serious Neck & Back Pain



Science rescues back & neck pain sufferers?: Radio Frequency Waves are used to block the nerve supply to the painful area and may alleviate pain and restore function to many.

While we cannot claim this is a complete "permanent cure" but... it can be a god-send for so many who were in constant pain.

Really... what would it be worth it to you could get out of pain for long enough so you could start enjoying your everyday life again?

Would it be worth it to be able to finally get a good nights sleep again?

How about being able to go for a simple walk or just do your basic daily chores without worrying about so much pain?

Is It Safe?

Yes. This procedure has been done countless times and continues to have an excellent safety record. It is minimally invasive and is not surgical.

Who Should Try This Treatment?

RF should be considered after other treatments, such as anti-inflammatory pain medication and physical therapy do not offer good enough results.

RF has also been found effective AFTER back surgery when patient's still feel pain.

The pain after a failed back surgery can be debilitating for some and this procedure may be the only thing that helps give you relief.

What To Do Next If You Are In Pain And The "X" Factor

Here is the "X" factor many do not consider that might be the difference between you getting the best possible treatment or not.

Many experts suggest choosing a medical clinic that offers all these treatments and has the proper, most advanced technology all under one roof without the need for a surgical center or hospital.

Major Savings In Time And Costs Of Care?

NYC Pain MD's method allows you to avoid expensive hospital or out patient surgi-center facility fees which often run 3 to 4 times the cost of the procedure itself. And you don't have to go through the huge stress and time consuming process of going all over the city to outside centers. All the NYC Pain MD treatments can be done in out in-office procedure suites saving you stress, time and dollars. NYC Pain MD believes this additional "X" factor is one of the reasons so many back pain sufferers travel from all over to be treated at one of their advanced medical clinics.

Your Invitation

NYC Pain MD offers a limited number of complimentary back pain treatment screenings every month. These screenings are a way for back pain sufferers to get some of their questions answered and see if they are a candidate for one of the cutting-edge treatments offered at NYC Pain MD. If you would like a complimentary screening, just call 877-907-2934 and tell the scheduling expert who answers the phone, "I would like a complimentary back pain screening."

The screenings fill up fast every month. If you do not call in time to get one this month, the expert will schedule you for next month.

This screening is no cost and no obligation.

Many of the treatments offered are covered by many insurance plans and traditional medicare.

Kushner denies discussing his security clearance with Trump

An NYT report suggested Trump had ordered Kushner have top-secret clearance.

GETTY IMAGES

Donald Trump's son-in-law and White House adviser Jared Kushner denied that he spoke with the president about his security clearance, according to an interview with the Axios news outlet that comes amid a congressional investigation of the issue.

"I have not discussed it with him," Kushner told "Axios on HBO" on Sunday when asked if he had talked about his clearance with Trump.

In February, the New York Times cited sources saying Trump had ordered Kushner be given top-secret clearance, despite qualms by some officials.

A House committee is investigating whether some staffers in Trump's White House received high-level security clearances over the objections of career officials. Those staffers include Kushner and his wife, Ivanka Trump, congressional sources have told Reuters.

Representatives of the House Oversight committee had no immediate comment on Kushner's remarks.

Top-secret security clearances are granted after in-depth background checks and are required if government officials need access to highly classified information.

Kushner separately told Axios in the interview, taped May 20, that he was unsure if he would report contact by Russia or another hostile foreign power ahead of the 2020 presidential election in which Trump is seeking re-election.

Security-clearance holders' contact with foreigners is scrutinized in an effort to avoid foreign influence that could pose a security risk.

Kushner's attendance at a 2016 meeting at Trump Tower with Russians offering to help Trump's campaign was examined as part of the U.S. Special Counsel's Office investigation into Moscow's meddling in U.S. politics. Kushner was not charged by Special Counsel Robert Mueller.

Asked if he would call the FBI if it happened again, Kushner told Axios: "I don't know. It's hard to do hypotheticals," calling the Trump Tower meeting "a clown show" that did not produce "anything that was salacious."

U.S. Sen. Mark Warner, the top Democrat on the Senate Intelligence Committee, which is also investigating Russian interference in the 2016 election, said Kushner's comments raise questions about his trustworthiness. REUTERS

Mexico draws red line on asylum in talks to stop Trump tariffs

Border gates are seen at the World Trade Bridge border with Mexico, in Laredo, Texas. REUTERS

Mexico on Monday made clear it would reject a U.S. idea to take in all Central American asylum seekers if it is raised at talks this week with the Trump administration, which has threatened to impose tariffs if Mexico does not crack down on illegal immigration.

President Donald Trump last week said he will impose tariffs on all Mexican imports from June 10 as a way to pressure Mexico to tackle large flows of mostly Central American migrants passing through on the way to the United States.

The threat was a shock to global markets, which are already suffering from a trade war between the United States and China.

Speaking to reporters in Washington before this week's meetings, Mexican Foreign Minister Marcelo Ebrard said the country is committed to continuing to work to keep illegal immigrants from Central America from reaching the United States border.

> "An agreement about a safe third country would not be acceptable for Mexico."
> Mexican Foreign Minister Marcelo Ebrard

However, a more radical proposal favored by some U.S. officials to designate Mexico a "safe third country," which would force Central Americans seeking asylum in the United States to instead seek that status in Mexico, is not an option, he said.

"An agreement about a safe third country would not be acceptable for Mexico," Ebrard said. "They have not yet proposed it to me. But it would not be acceptable and they know it."

The talks in Washington will be closely watched by financial markets concerned that import tariffs would ultimately hit the U.S. economy by adding to the cost of a wide range of goods in the United States, from Mexican-made cars and auto parts to beer and avocados.

U.S. business groups have opposed the tariff plan and the influential U.S. Chamber of Commerce is looking at ways to challenge it, including legal options.

MEXICAN ECONOMY

The Mexican economy, which is heavily reliant on exports to the United States, shrank in the first quarter and would reel under U.S. levies that would start at 5 percent but could reach as high as 25 percent this year under Trump's plan.

U.S. stock index futures fell on Monday as the multi-front trade war made investors increasingly risk-averse and fueled worries of a recession, although the market ticked higher, propped up by health care stocks.

Trump, who has embraced protectionism as part of an "America First" agenda aimed at reshaping global trade, said in a tweet last Thursday that he would ratchet up tariffs on Mexico "until the Illegal Immigration problem is remedied."

Since January, the government of Mexican President Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador has ramped up migrant detentions and deportations, but that has not been enough to stop the growing tide of families reaching the United States, mainly from Guatemala and Honduras.

Mexican officials in Washington warned that the tariffs could backfire, fanning further migration by hammering regional economies.

"Tariffs, along with the decision to cancel aid programs to the northern Central American countries, could have a counterproductive effect and would not reduce migration flows," Mexico's ambassador to the United States, Martha Barcena, told the news conference.

Blackbeard's ship embarks for US Supreme Court in video piracy case

A documentary filmmaker accused North Carolina officials of unlawfully pirating his footage.

The nine black-robed justices of the U.S. Supreme Court will soon navigate the treacherous legal waters around a sailing ship made famous in the 18th century by the notorious English pirate known as Blackbeard.

The court on Monday agreed to hear a bid by a documentary filmmaker to revive his lawsuit against state officials in North Carolina whom he accused of unlawfully pirating his footage of the wrecked pirate ship named the Queen Anne's Revenge, which went down in 1718.

The filmmaker, Frederick Allen, has appealed a lower court's ruling that North Carolina could not be sued under federal law for allegedly infringing his copyrights on five videos and a photograph of salvage operation for the ship in the Atlantic Ocean off the coast of Beaufort, North Carolina.

Though states typically are shielded from lawsuits under the U.S. Constitution through a form of protection known as sovereign immunity, the case hinges on whether the shield applies to copyright infringement. In 1990, the U.S. Congress passed a law allowing states to be held liable for illegal copying.

Blackbeard, whose name was Edward Teach, ran aground the Queen Anne's Revenge, his flagship, on a sandbar 58 years before the United States declared independence from Britain. By law, the ship and its artifacts are owned by the state.

A private salvage company located the wreck in 1996. Allen and his firm, Nautilus Productions, documented the efforts by divers and archaeologists to recover artifacts. Allen obtained federal copyright registrations on the videos and still images.

Allen and Nautilus sued North Carolina in federal court after state officials used some of the documentary materials on YouTube and a state agency website. The state also passed a law converting the materials into public records.

The Richmond, Virginia-based 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals threw out the case last year, ruling that Congress exceeded its powers in passing the 1990 Copyright Remedy Clarification Act as an attempt to override state sovereign immunity in copyright disputes.

Appealing to the Supreme Court, Allen said states are flagrantly infringing authors' copyrights and invoking sovereign immunity as a way to avoid paying damages.

If the 4th Circuit's decision is not overturned, Allen said in a legal filing, "creators of original expression will be left without remedy when states trample their federal copyrights."

North Carolina Attorney General Joshua Stein emphasized the shipwreck's historical and archaeological value and told the justices that the 1990 law is unconstitutional.

Blackbeard prowled the shipping lanes off the Atlantic coast of North America and throughout the Caribbean before being slain — shot, stabbed and decapitated — in 1718 during an encounter with British naval forces at North Carolina's Ocracoke Inlet. REUTERS

SIDEWALK STOPPERS

Why is it that people love to come to a dead stop in the middle of the sidewalk while they are on their phone or not paying attention and block all walking traffic? It's so rude and just not considerate. Not to mention, when they stop, you bump into them — which you can't avoid doing when they stop — and then they look at you like you did something wrong. Ugh! Next time, look up and see what's going on in the world around you before causing a traffic jam.

Pokémon is literally everywhere these days, and this Level 20 Thermaltake case is proof of that: with first-generation starters — Bulbasaur, Squirtle and Charmander — on one side and a bomb similar to a pokeball, this model traveled from the United States to battle at Computex. Honorable mention to the Detective Pikachu sign on the inside face of the front.

THE STEAMPUNK TYPEWRITER

This prototype seems taken from "Bioshock: Infinite" or an episode of "Penny Dreadful," and is as fantastic as impossible. Fuku and Mikkeller NYC team up for the Sando Sipper

Eat fried chicken. Drink beer. Repeat.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

ALL PHOTOS FUKU

Is there anything that goes better with fried chicken than an ice-cold beer? In a reverse scenario, you could argue that there isn't anything that goes better with an ice-cold beer than some crispy fried chicken. As fans of the world's greatest food know — I will not back down on that statement — Momofuku mastermind David Chang has made his mad dash toward claiming the trophy of serving the best affordable fried chicken sandwich in the city with his restaurant Fuku. But with a recent partnership with Mikkeller New York City, the two may have come up with the ultimate beer to wash it all down with: the Sando Sipper.

With a crisp and fuller body than the average American pale lager, the Sando Sipper is perfect for washing down the bold flavors of Chang's sandwiches while having its malty flavors show through without battling for the spotlight. It's beer and fried chicken living in the kind of harmony that you have only dreamed of but never experienced.

"It's kind of the perfect relationship between Fuku and Mikkeller New York City," says Richie Saunders, the head brewer at Mikkeller New York City and the inventor of this delicious new beer. "Fuku is obviously making some amazing fried chicken, great fingers and sandwiches. We're doing our beer, some IPAs, some lagers, but when we got together to focus on this project we wanted to focus on a very light, clean beer that was going to accentuate the great flavors in fried chicken and complement them perfectly but not be overpowering to the chicken and not have the chicken be overpowering to the beer. We looked to American pale lager as a style. The traditional APL are generally really watered down, dumbed-down mass-produced products and we wanted to dial up the flavors and again not overpower anything. We went to a lot of American malts, some German malts and German hops with a very standard American lager yeast and wound up with the Sando Sipper, which I'm a huge fan of and it seems like people are really happy with how it's pairing with the chicken. I think, as a whole, we're happy together."

This new American pale lager will be available starting tomorrow, Wednesday, June 5, at the Wall Street and Brookfield Place locations of Fuku as well as the Mikkeller NYC Taproom in Flushing, Queens, and the Fuku concession stand in Citi Field — just in time for gorgeous summer Mets games. Sando Sipper cans will be sold at all of these locations for $6.50, with $15 4-packs and $6.50 16-ounce pours available at the taproom.

"With 'Ma' I break all the stereotypes that people have of me" OCTAVIA SPENCER

The actress stars in the thriller "Ma" produced by Jason Blum, known for films such as "Paranormal Activity" and "The Purge."

PATRICIA CARRANZA
letters@metro.us

In this thriller, American actress Octavia Spencer breaks with the stereotypes of strong women she has interpreted in past films like "The Help," which earned her an Oscar in 2011 for Best Supporting Actress.

The 49-year-old actress is back on the big screen, but now in the horror genre, with "Ma," in which she plays Sue Ann, a woman who seeks revenge on her high school friends after years of harassment and torture. She co-stars with Luke Evans, Juliette Lewis, Missi Pyel and Allison Janney, among others, under the direction of Tate Taylor.

In an interview with Metro, Spencer pointed out that she had wanted to leave aside empowered women characters and show a new facet as an actress.

How would you describe your character in this movie?
Sue Ann, whom everyone knows as Ma, is a lonely woman who opens the doors of her basement to a group of young people so that they can have a place to do their parties, which supposedly is a safe place, but when she discovers that these guys have a relationship with her past, everything becomes very dark. It is when she brings out all the hatred she has had inside for many years.

Throughout your career you have played several characters, but this one is different. What were the biggest challenges of interpreting Ma?
Of course, playing Ma was one of the biggest challenges of my career. It really was a difficult character because she is very complex. She is a woman who emotionally has many problems and loves the drama in her life, then when she realizes that she can take revenge on those who hurt her, she tries to do that at the expense of everything. I think one of the most important points is that she behaves like a teenager when she is really an adult.

Which genre do you most like to do: drama, thrillers or comedies?
I enjoy everything. I couldn't just say one in particular because it would be a lie. I love what I do, I love being an actress and being able to have opportunities to become different characters. That's what I live for and if I can spread a message that helps society, that makes it even better still. But if you invite me to do an action movie, I may doubt it because I don't like weapons.

You are an actress who has portrayed strong women in films like "The Help." Why do you play these kinds of characters?
It's funny because in this film I break all the stereotypes that people have of me. They know me as an actress who plays wise, strong and even shameless women, but this time I'm just the opposite. In this film I'm a weak and vulnerable woman and I think it's good to have those two sides because it's always good to give voice to both victims and perpetrators.

Who are the women you admire?
I admire many women but mainly my sisters, who always sacrificed to get ahead, and my mom, because without them I would not be the woman I am today. There are many women I admire but I always put my family first.

What to watch for at Giants, Jets mandatory minicamp

Mandatory minicamp starts up today for both NYC-area teams.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Both the New York Giants and Jets are straying from the usual offseason script this week as they hold their mandatory minicamps this week.

The three-day camp will span from today through Thursday, an event that usually concludes a team's offseason programming.

There are plenty of question marks surrounding both teams, even though they seem to be trending in different directions.

For the first time in a decade, things are looking up for the Jets, even though they are now mired in a general-manager search that has heaped plenty of embarrassment back on the organization.

A strong offseason with some marquee signings suggests that the Jets are on the cusp of making a strong push for an AFC East title, though they'll have to continue dealing with the aging yet unwavering New England Patriots.

For the Giants, many are just hoping that the dumpster fire doesn't burn down the entire building.

General manager Dave Gettleman made a series of shocking decisions this offseason. He traded away Odell Beckham Jr., let Landon Collins walk in free agency, and drew plenty of criticism at the 2019 NFL Draft.

Here are some things to watch for from both teams' minicamps this week:

FOR THE JETS

HERE COME THE BIG GUNS

The biggest thing to come out of this week's activities is that minicamp is mandatory.

That means all the big names have to show up for new head coach Adam Gase.

Most notably, star running back Le'Veon Bell will be making his first appearance in Jets gear this week after missing out on OTAs.

It was a big talking point after the three-time

Pro Bowler signed a four-year, $52.5 million deal to join New York in May after a messy divorce with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Linebacker CJ Mosley will also be a regular at Jets facilities after missing out on some OTAs as well. The former Baltimore Raven signed a five-year, $85 million deal this offseason to bring a bona fide presence alongside Avery Williamson in the Jets' defense.

Veteran cornerback Trumaine Johnson will also make his way back to the team after skipping out on the late-May workouts. Johnson underwhelmed during his first season with the Jets. He is expected to rebound in 2019 to add a boost to the secondary.

SAM I AM

With Bell being introduced to the backfield behind second-year quarterback Sam Darnold, Gase will get a first look at his two most important offensive players together.

Darnold is tabbed as the Jets' franchise quarterback of the future but trudged through a rookie season in which he lacked legitimate playmakers.

Bell provides an ultimate security blanket given his ability to catch the ball out of the backfield.

However, Gase was brought on to help develop Darnold, whose ceiling is much higher than that of Jay Cutler, Tim Tebow, Matt Moore or Brock Osweiler. Those are just a few quarterbacks Gase was able to get some solid production out of throughout his career.

FOR THE GIANTS

OH, DANNY BOY

There are plenty of Giants fans still stewing over Gettleman using the No. 6 pick in the draft to take Daniel Jones.

While many expected the Duke product to redshirt for at least 2019 during Eli Manning's final year under contract, the tune has shifted a bit.

The Giants continuously claim how much Jones has impressed during rookie minicamp. Head coach Pat Shurmur added more noise by saying last month that he should be ready to start come Week 1.

But mandatory minicamp will provide Jones with more eyes on him and a full-strength squad around him. We'll see how he handles things in June.

ALL EYES ON THE LINE

The Giants attempted to further improve their offensive line this offseason by adding Kevin Zeitler and Mike Remmers to help protect the team's most important assets.

After a 2018 season in which Eli Manning was running (slowly) for his life and running back, Saquon Barkley was forced to use his brilliance to win NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year. The line is imperative for any kind of success this year.

Minicamp isn't going to provide fans with a real look at the offensive line considering there won't be a ton of contact. However, a relationship between the line and Manning, Jones and Barkley is important to create this early.

If each side knows the other's tendencies, the better chance the Giants' offense will have of clicking in 2019.

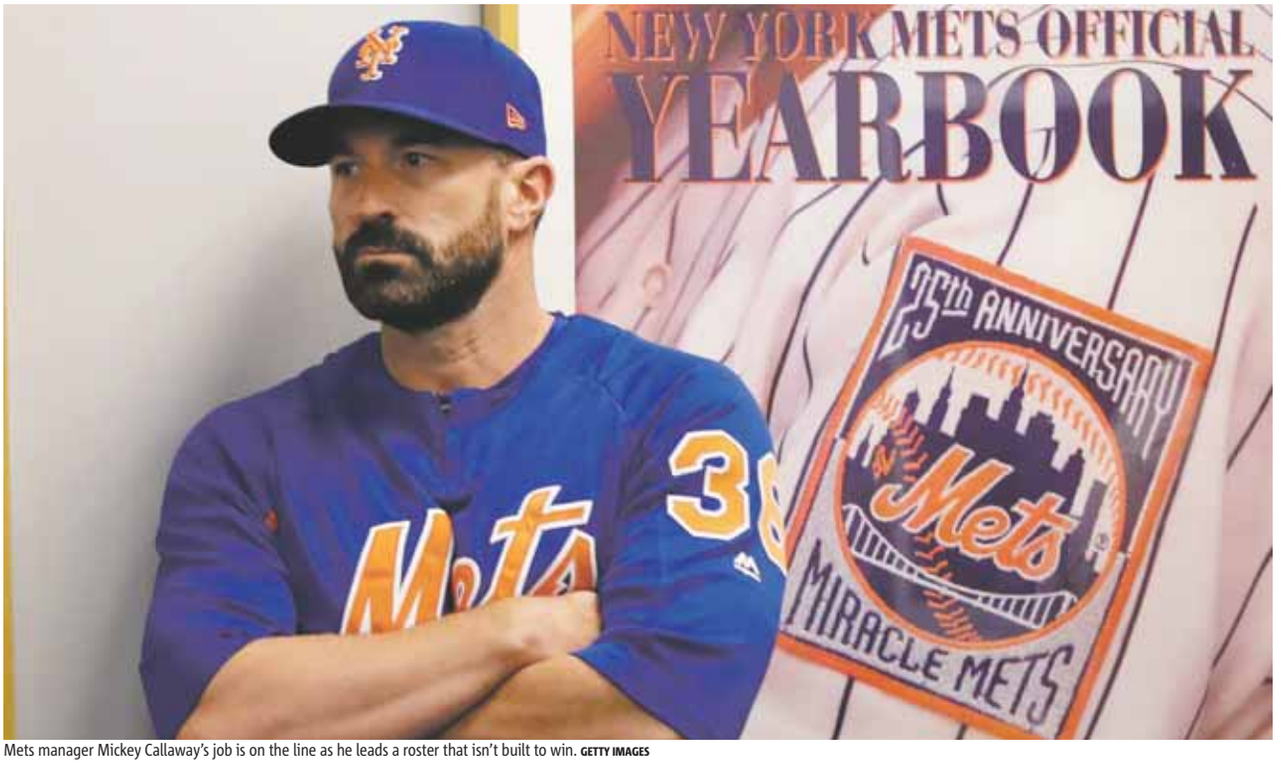
METS WILL CONTINUE GOING NOWHERE UNLESS THE CULTURE CHANGES NOW

OPINION

JOE PANTORNO
@JoePantorno



Mets manager Mickey Callaway's job is on the line as he leads a roster that isn't built to win. GETTY IMAGES

It seems as though I'm running a weekly column attempting to explain just how much of a sham the New York Mets are.

And still, it's less tiring than watching the dysfunction that continues to put a stranglehold on this organization.

The Mets are coming off yet another series loss, a maddening West Coast road trip featuring inconsistent offense, starting pitching, bullpen meltdowns and horrific managing.

So, you know, every single facet of a baseball team.

After blowing a 5-1 lead to the Arizona Diamondbacks on Saturday in a 6-5 loss, the Mets were beaten down by a rookie pitcher in a 7-1 loss as Steven Matz's first-inning issues continued.

As the Mets fell to three games under .500, Mickey Callaway provided the same old song and dance, claiming the team just needs to get better.

That's just not going to happen under the Mets' current business plan.

I can only rip the team's ownership so much. It's gotten to a point where the Wilpon family is giving James Dolan a run for his money as the most inept owners in New York.

They annually find ways to avoid spending money on talent that would make the Mets a legitimate contender rather than hopeful pretender. A hopeful pretender that's just good enough to get butts in the seats at Citi Field when a bobblehead is being given away.

The Mets were never going to challenge for a playoff spot with this roster. Even with general manager Brodie Van Wagenen's bold claims over the winter that his team was the one to beat in the National League East.

I picked them to finish fourth in the division and I'm looking more and more correct with each passing day.

The good thing is the Mets don't seem to be playing with their fans' hopes and dreams too much. The implosion is coming earlier than normal as May was horrendous.

June isn't starting too well, either, as Sunday's loss in Arizona was the Mets' 17th over their last 21 road games.

The unfair thing about all this for Mets fans is that the team is still only five games out of first. That means there still is a shot of actually pushing for a division title.

But that would only force the Wilpon family to spend some more money to buy some actual upgrades for the club.

New York's seven-game road trip saw their bullpen post an ERA of over 11, which included three blown saves. Their 13 blown saves this year is the most in the majors.

While star closer Edwin Diaz imploded in a non-save situation against the Dodgers, relying on the likes of Tyler Bashlor, Drew Gagnon, and Robert Gsellman is lunacy for Mickey Callaway.

That's all Callaway has to work with, even though his decision-making skills have been downright putrid.

It's only a matter of time until he is shown the door if things continue going south. That's just the way it goes in this business, even though the blame should be squarely on the shoulders of the Wilpon family.

Craig Kimbrel, one of the best relievers of this generation, is expected to sign with a team this week. If ownership was serious about winning, they would make a serious push for him to improve the inefficient bullpen.

But we all know there's a better chance of Yoenis Cespedes' broken ankle healing tomorrow than that happening.

So the ire once again returns to the owner's box.

As Mets fans carry on with the same old lamentation of "Why us?", the answer resides with the Wilpons.

The cast of characters changes, it always does. Yet the Mets are championship-less since 1986.

That's on the Fred and Jeff.

After 57 years and just two championships, it's time for the culture around the Mets to change. And it doesn't seem feasible that MLB commissioner Rob Manfred will heroically step in and force the Wilpons to sell the team.

This no longer can be a team that hangs its hat on developing star pitching and contending with arms. That's just not how baseball works anymore, especially with the strain and injuries that befall anyone wearing blue and orange.

The Mets have continuously been burned by this notion throughout the decades. "Generation K" of Bill Pulsipher, Jason Isringhausen and Paul Wilson back in 1995 was a dud. The fab five of Matt Harvey, Jacob deGrom, Noah Syndergaard, Steven Matz and Zack Wheeler never came to fruition.

As the organization celebrates the 50th anniversary of the 1969 Miracle Mets, it seems as though they don't realize that you aren't going to win a championship in that style anymore.

You're not going to put together a dynamic pitching duo like Tom Seaver and Jerry Koosman, who had over 17 wins and sub-3.00 ERAs. You're not going to win a World Series like they did when only one player (Tommie Agee) hit over 20 home runs. You're not going to win a World Series as they did with a collective team batting average of .242 that ranked seventh out of 12 teams in the National League.

Yet here the Mets are, 50 years later, with a .247 team batting average, relying on inconsistent pitchers that are not allowed to throw more than 100 pitches. Whether that's because they aren't good enough to get late into games or because of the limits that come with the modern-day game remains a wild card every night.

Every Mets fan has to come to the harsh realization that this team likely isn't going to be a real contender. Toeing this .500 line all season isn't going to bring any sort of change, either.

So either the Wilpons go out and start picking up the pieces needed to get this team into a favorable position to win the NL East, or start shifting the culture now.

That means trading Noah Syndergaard and Zack Wheeler for promising young bats, offloading veterans like Todd Frazier and Robinson Cano (a difficult task given that contract) for real bullpen help, and trying to find the next Pete Alonso and Jeff McNeil rather than the next Doc Gooden.

Baseball is run by potent offenses, towering home runs and timely hitting in 2019. Blame it on superior preparation from competent managers around the league, aggressive GMs willing to make a splash with the backing of owners, or just on the league "juicing" their baseballs.

Regardless, the Mets are going about this whole thing incorrectly and need to make a statement — one way or another — soon.
